

contents

Acknowledgments	vii
PART I A transformed culture of death and grief	1
1 Introduction: The world we have lost	3
2 'Death denial' and silent grief	17
PART II The two World Wars and denial of death	39
3 The Great War: Heroic deaths and distant graves	41
4 The 'silent heartache' of the Great War	75
5 Private and secular grief: Katharine Susannah Prichard	106
6 Airmen missing, presumed dead: 'Without emotion, without witness, without farewell'	127
7 The 'horrible nightmare' of prisoners of war in the Asia-Pacific	152
8 The Second World War and the suppression of sorrow	171

(vi) Changing ways of death in twentieth-century Australia

PART III	Medicine and dying in the twentieth century	191
9	The medicalisation of death	193
10	Kylie Tennant and the war against cancer	208
11	Euthanasia and the doctors	235
12	Palliative care and the hospice movement	258
PART IV	The funeral business, cemeteries and cremation	279
13	The funeral business in Australia: 'A racket in human sorrow'?	281
14	Overcrowded burial grounds, modern lawn cemeteries and mausolea	304
15	Cremation in Australia since 1914	328
PART V	The second cultural shift	349
16	The revival of expressive grief	351
	Notes	373
	Select Bibliography	392
	Index	399